Proposal for “Welcome to Canada: A Guide for Newcomers to Canada”

Project Title: Welcome to Canada: A Guide for Newcomers to Canada

Subtitle: Comprehensive resources for immigrants, refugees, and international students

Author: Marwa Samim

Completion Date: August 8, 2024

Project Overview

The project aims to provide essential resources and insights for newcomers, including immigrants, refugees, and international students, to help them successfully make the transition to Canadian society.

Purpose and Significance

A multicultural nation, Canada welcomes newcomers from all over the world. However, newcomers often experience cultural differences, language barriers, and difficulties understanding local practices. This guide aims to provide:

1. Empower Newcomers: Prepare newcomers with applicable information and practical tips to content their transition into Canadian life.
2. Promote Integration: Encourage newcomers to engage with local resources and support networks to foster a sense of belonging and community.
3. Celebrate Diversity: Highlight Canada's rich multicultural fabric and the contributions of various communities.

Content Overview

The guide is structured into several essential sections:

1. Introduction: An overview of the purpose of the guide and its importance for newcomers.
2. Welcome Message: A message of encouragement and positivity from the author based on personal experiences as a newcomer.
3. Welcome Kit: This guide provides practical steps for completing initial tasks, such as booking a hotel, finding temporary housing, registering children for school, obtaining a driver's license, and registering for healthcare.
4. Support for International Students: Resources and organizations that provide assistance tailored specifically for international students.

5. Addressing Challenges: Sharing personal stories and evidence from different individuals who have faced challenges adapting to a new culture.
6. Cultural Insights: Information on Canadian culture, customs, and traditions to enhance understanding and integration.
7. Conclusion: A summary and final word of encouragement for the readers.

Target audience:

The guide is intended for:

- Immigrants and refugees starting a new life in Canada
- International students seeking guidance
- Community organizations supporting newcomers

Resources and Acknowledgments

I would like to acknowledge those who have supported me in this project, including family members, friends, and volunteers who contributed their time and knowledge. Special thanks to my father and Madina for their invaluable assistance in editing and navigating the completion process.

Conclusion

A guide for newcomers to Canada, “Welcome to Canada: A Guide for Newcomers to Canada,” is an essential resource that helps newcomers feel connected, informed, and supported. In this article, insights and personal experiences are combined to inspire and encourage newcomers to embrace their Canadian adventures.

Acknowledgments

- ☐ I would like to thank my father for his invaluable help in editing this guide. Thank you!

Secondly, I would like to thank Madina for helping me navigate the necessary steps to complete my project. Her assistance with filling out forms and providing directions to follow once my project was finished was extremely helpful.

In addition, I would like to acknowledge the responsibility and support of several volunteers who assisted me with this project. Thanks to them, I was able to accomplish much more than I could have accomplished alone.

I would like to thank all of you for being a part of this journey.

Introduction

In this guide,

You will learn about finding employment, obtaining healthcare and education, and also getting settled in your new community. I will try my best in this guide to support you every step of the way if you're an immigrant, refugee, or international student.

It is intended,

- ☐ For dear newcomers to Canada, including refugees, immigrants, and international students.

Welcome Message

Dear Newcomers, Welcome to Canada!  You've taken the first step toward a new life in Canada, and we are looking so so forward to welcoming you to our unique community!

My experience as a person who has moved to a new country, I know how difficult it can be to navigate a new culture, language, and lifestyle. It's common for newcomers to wonder how difficult it may be to live in Canada. Wow, my answer is living in Canada is a fantastic experience! Why, because *

Welcome to Canada!

*Canada is known for its friendly people, amazing natural beauty, and high quality of life. From coast to coast, our country is home to vibrant cities, breathtaking landscapes, and warm communities.

As you settle into your new life in Canada, I know you will likely experience a range of emotions in your heart, including an exciting time for the future, but also one filled with uncertainty. That's why I've put together this Welcome Kit to provide you with essential information and resources to help you settle into your new life in Canada.

Welcome Kit

1. When you arrive in Canada, it is important for you to have a temporary place to live for at least a month (4–6 weeks before you begin your long-term housing search in Canada).

1. Booking a hotel

It is a good idea to book a hotel. There are many reasons for staying in a hotel, including:

1. Safety: As a newcomer to a new country, a hotel is the only safe place to stay.
2. Getting to know different neighbourhoods: while staying in a hotel can help you decide where to live long-term.
3. Helpful resources: As I know there are so many hotels that offer free Wi-Fi, breakfast, and laundry services, which make your stay easier.

❖ To book a hotel, follow these steps

1. Make a Budget: Decide how much money you are willing to spend each night on a hotel, as this will help you narrow down your choices.
2. Look for Hotels: Find hotels on websites like Booking.com or Expedia.
3. Check the Location: The easiest way to get around is to stay in a hotel close to public transportation or stores.
4. Make your ordering: When you find a hotel that you like, book your room online. You will receive a confirmation email with your booking details.

2. Finding Temporary House

- ☐ How to find a house in Canada as an immigrant or newcomer
 - This is a challenging task, but with this foundation and research, you can make it easier.
- 1. Take your time to research the housing market in your desired location and begin looking for rental and purchase options. Things to consider include:
 - Connect to accommodations such as water and electricity supply
 - Transformations
 - Safety
 - Access to community centre services, and
 - Stores
- 2. Find out what types of housing are available in Canada, such as apartments, townhouses, houses, and condos.
- 3. Make sure you understand the average rent and home prices in the areas you are interested in.

I find this information very hard, but it will help you a lot. To get more information, please look at the following link:

<https://www.cmhc-schl.gc.ca/consumers/home-buying/newcomers>
(CMHC site) to obtain helpful housing information in different languages for newcomers to Canada. Also, it can help you buy or rent an apartment or house in Canada.

3. Education for Children

- If you have children who will be attending school in Canada, it is important to register them as soon as possible. Basic education in Canada is mandatory for all children from ages 5 and 6 to 16 and 18 depending on the province or territory.

Key points for newcomers' parents

1. Research the local school boards and find out the registration process. Make sure to gather all necessary documents, such as:
 - Birth certificates
 - Proof of address, to complete the registration.
2. Compulsory Education: In Canada, education is governed by provincial and territorial legislation, and each province has its own laws regarding compulsory education. From a certain age, children are required to attend school until they reach a specified age, usually between 16 and 18, according to the province.

For example,

- Ontario: Under the Education Act, children must attend school from the age of 6 until they are 18 years old.
- British Columbia: The School Act mandates children to attend school from age 5 to 16.
- Alberta: The School Act requires school attendance for children aged 6 to 16.

Each province or territory has its own set of laws that establish compulsory education. Parents are responsible for making sure their children are registered and regularly attending class.

You can find the most recent and specific information by visiting the official websites of each province or territory's ministry of education. For example:

- Ontario Ministry of Education: Ontario's Education Act
- British Columbia Ministry of Education: School Act - BC
- Alberta Education: School Act - Alberta

3. Resources: For a comprehensive understanding of the Canadian education system, please look at the following link. This resource will provide you with valuable insights and detailed information.

My Journey through Education

When I first arrived in Canada almost three years ago, I often felt scared at the thought of starting a new school. I didn't know how to speak English at all, which made everything seem daunting. I remember my first day; my whole body was shaking as I stepped into a school that was so different from back home. As I walked with my siblings to see the school, I noticed the bustling hallways filled with students speaking a language that was still foreign to me. I realized that I wanted to speak English just like them, but the idea felt overwhelming. The fun part came when my teachers and classmates asked me to introduce myself. I struggled to find the words and didn't even know how to say "My name is Marwa." Thankfully, my great teacher was there to help me learn how to say it. Those initial days were incredibly challenging, but one day I had a breakthrough. I realized that English did not have to be my weakness. Determined to improve, I spent countless hours practicing. Within three months, I noticed significant progress. My teachers were proud of my dedication and improvement, and that motivated me to keep going. Over the years, I received five awards for my language achievements, which made me realize that hard work truly pays off. I knew that if I continued to work diligently, I could be one of the best. When it was time for my graduation from Grade 9, I received another award for my achievements throughout the entire school. Seeing the pride on my teachers' faces filled me with joy and reaffirmed my belief that perseverance leads to success. My journey has taught me that, no matter how tough things may seem, if I never give up on my dreams, I will ultimately find success.

3. Obtaining a Driver's Licence

If you plan to drive in Canada, understanding the process of obtaining a driver's license is an essential part of settling into your new country. This guide will tell you what you need to know about the licensing requirements in your province or territory. Make sure you understand the requirements of the province or territory where you will live, as every region in Canada has its own rules and procedures for acquiring a driver's license. To familiarize yourself with the Canadian geography and regional differences, please visit this link: <https://thecanadaguide.com/places/geography/>

1. Make sure you understand the requirements of the province or territory where you will live. Every region in Canada has its own rules and procedures for acquiring a driver's license.
2. For your Canadian driver's license, you will likely need to pass a written test on Canadian road rules and traffic signs. Most provinces provide a handbook covering these topics.
 - Practice Tests
 - offer online practice tests
 - or take a handbook to practice
3. To pass the driving test, you need to take lessons with a certified instructor. They will give you the knowledge and skills you need. Depending on your province, you will need to complete a practical driving test after passing the written test.
4. When you pass your tests, you will receive your Canadian driver's license. Don't forget to check the expiration date and the renewal process, as license renewals vary by province.

5. Visit your provincial transportation department's website for more detailed information. Here, you'll find:

- Application forms
- Study materials for tests
- Information on driving schools

(YOU NEED TO PRACTICE A LOT TO PASS THE TEST!)

4. Healthcare Registration

In Canada, health care is publicly funded and administered primarily at the provincial and territorial level. This means that each province or territory has its own health care system, governed by the Canada Health Act, which ensures access to medically necessary hospital and physician services without direct charges at the point of care. New immigrants to Canada must register for health coverage to access these health services. Typically, registration involves providing identification and proof of residency in the respective province or territory. Many provinces impose a waiting period for new residents (often ranging from three to six months) before health coverage begins, although some exceptions may apply, especially for refugees.

☐ What you need to do to register for healthcare

1. In order to register for provincial health coverage, permanent residents, certain work permit holders, and refugees must meet certain requirements.

☐ Needed documents:

- Immigration Documents: Permanent Resident Card or documents showing immigration status.
- You must provide proof of your residency, such as a rental agreement, utility bill, or any other document that shows your new address.

☐ Registration step:

- You can visit your province's health ministry website to apply (online, by mail, or in person).
- Just to let you know, some provinces have a waiting period (up to 3 months) before coverage begins.

☐ Getting a health card

- A health card will be issued to you after registration that must be shown to access medical services. You should keep the card with you at all times.

☐ Using healthcare services

Finding a doctor: Look for a family physician through community referrals or provincial resources.

Walk-in Clinics: Non-emergency health issues can be treated at walk-in clinics.

Emergency Services: Call 911 or go to the nearest hospital.

5. Open a Canadian Bank Account

Opening a Canadian bank account is essential for managing your finances in Canada. Research different banks and choose one that suits your needs, providing data on the leading banks in Canada which include:

- ❖ Royal Bank of Canada
- ❖ Toronto-Dominion Bank
- ❖ Bank of Montreal
- ❖ Bank of Nova Scotia and
- ❖ Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce

☐ And the question is How to open a bank account in Canada?

When you are present in Canada, you will be required to present a passport, immigration papers, and a temporary resident, work, or student permit to open a bank account. While it is possible for me to obtain a bank account this way, it is best to set up an online bank account before moving.

6. Get a Canadian Phone Number

In addition to staying connected with friends and family, you can also communicate with potential employers, service providers, and local contacts through a Canadian cell phone number.

These steps will help you to get a Canadian phone number

- a) Research Cell Phone Providers: Compare different providers and plans to find one that suits your needs
- b) Visit a Store: Go to a retailer for your chosen provider. Bring identification documents, which may include:
 - A study or work permit
 - An immigration document
 - A bank statement or utility bill with your name and address
- c) Get a SIM Card: Purchase a SIM card and select a mobile plan.
- d) Activate Your Number: Store staff will assist you in activating your number and setting up your phone.

7. Improve Your English in a Language Training Centre

The ability to speak English is a challenge for many men and women in Canada, and some may even be unable to attend traditional schools due to their age or circumstances. The learning of English is supported by numerous centers across the country, which include,

1. Calgary's Newcomers Centre provides English language classes tailored to different skill levels for newcomers.

2. LINC (Language Instruction for Newcomers to Canada) provides free language training, focusing on improving English skills for daily life, work, and settlement.

3. The Calgary Immigrant Educational Society (CIES) provides English classes and employment services for immigrants and refugees.

4. Immigrant Services Society of British Columbia (ISSofBC) - Provides English language classes for newcomers.

Website: ISSofBC

5. Edmonton Public Library - Offers English language learning resources and conversation clubs.

Website: Edmonton Public Library

6. Saskatchewan Polytechnic - Offers ESL programs that cater to both academic and practical English skills.

Website: Saskatchewan Polytechnic

Manitoba

7. Immigrant Centre (Winnipeg) - Offers English language classes and support services for newcomers.

Website: Immigrant Centre

8. YMCA Quebec - Provides various language programs focused on English learning.

Website: YMCA Quebec Language Programs

9. BBC Learning English - offer free online resources for ESL learners.

10. Duolingo - A popular app for learning English through interactive exercises.

Website Duolingo

Calgary Public Library: The Calgary Public Library is a great resource for newcomers. I noticed many people participating in conversation circles and workshops aimed at improving their English language skills while I was visiting to print some papers. Upon asking a librarian about these programs, she informed me that they offer classes designed specifically for language improvement.

Why the Calgary Public Library?

When visiting the library, you can easily obtain a library card. With this card, you will have access to not only books and resources, but also English-enhancing programs. To receive the card, you will need to provide identification, and the staff will set up your username and password, which you can then use to access library resources. Also, there are many online courses available to help you learn English at your own pace, which can be especially beneficial to newcomers who are juggling many responsibilities.

6 Tips to improve your English

1. Find out your learning style
2. Speak a little English every day
3. Attend an English class or discussion group
4. Expand your vocabulary
5. Work on your pronunciation
6. Don't be afraid of making mistakes

The infographic features a teal header with the title and a cartoon character wearing headphones. The background is yellow with a list of six tips. At the bottom right, there are two cartoon characters talking, with speech bubbles. A small circular logo in the top right corner says 'Hello! Hello! English'.

8. Emergency Services

It is a great idea for newcomers to know how to access emergency services. I learned this information in school and I wanted to share it with you in this project so you can know what to do in emergency situations:

1. Police Services: In case of an emergency or crime, you can reach the police by calling 911. For non-emergency situations, find your local police department's non-emergency number online or in the phone book.
2. Fire Services: If you see a fire or smell smoke, don't hesitate to call 911 immediately. It's always best to err on the side of caution. Firefighters in Canada are trained to handle all sorts of emergencies, including:
 - fighting fire
 - rescue
 - fighting vehicle fires
3. Emergency Medical Services (EMS): If you or someone else is experiencing a medical emergency (like a serious injury or severe illness), call 911 for immediate assistance. EMS will arrive as fast as possible to provide necessary medical care.
4. Local Resources: Be sure to familiarize yourself with local emergency services. Many communities offer online resources or pamphlets that detail emergency contacts, fire safety, and more.

9.Public transportation

Introduction

Getting around Canada can be a challenge especially if you've never encountered snow-covered bus stops before! The following ideas I have put will help you navigate public transportation:

1. Finding Your Way: Most cities have a public transit website where you can check schedules and usual. You can often download apps that give real-time updates on bus and train arrivals.
2. Transit Passes: As I know some cities offer monthly or weekly passes, which can save your money compared to buying single-fare tickets. Don't forget to check for discounts for students or elders after all.

Tips for Navigating:

1. Plan forwards: Always look up routes before you head out, especially in winter, when the weather may impact schedules.
2. Riding the bus: Never be shy! Ask the driver if you're not sure where to get off. They're usually friendly and happy to assist.
3. Be Prepared for the Weather: In winter, if you're waiting for a bus, wear layers. Trust me dear newcomers, always wear enough layers in winter to stay warm!

This is the link I found. Please check it out if you need more information about public transportation. You can highlight the link, copy it (Control+C), then search for it in Google or another browser (Control +V).

Support for International Students in Canada

International students are increasingly turning to Canada for its world-class education system, diverse culture, and opportunities for professional development. The transition to life in a new country can be challenging, which is why various support mechanisms are available to assist international students in adjusting. The following 5 resources will help international students succeed academically and socially in Canada.

1. Orientation programs

1. Welcome sessions and campus tours familiarize students with their new environment.
2. Useful workshops cover essential topics like academic policies, health services, and student resources.
3. Students can connect with peers and faculty through networking opportunities.

2. Academic Support Services

- Students who are struggling with certain subjects can benefit from tutoring and mentoring.
- Writing and language support resources help improve academic writing and English proficiency.
- Study skills workshops provide tips for effective studying, note-taking, and exam preparation.

3. Counselling and Mental Health Services

1. Students facing similar issues can benefit from group therapy options.
2. Stress management workshops provide students with strategies for dealing with academic pressure and homesickness.

4. Cultural Awareness and Inclusivity Programs

1. Cultural exchange events celebrate diversity through food fairs, cultural nights, and festivals.
2. Workshops on intercultural communication help students understand and respect different cultural backgrounds.
3. Peer mentorship programs connect international students with local students for social support.

5. Community Engagement and Volunteer Opportunities

1. Volunteering and participating in community projects are both possible when you connect with local organizations.
2. Internship programs allow students to gain hands-on experience in diverse fields while enhancing their resumes.
3. Cultural immersion activities encourage participation in local traditions and community events.

I sincerely apologize to all international students. The information I have shared is what I know, and I included it in my project because I hoped it would help you a little. I learned this information from my teachers and from a program at my school where speakers discussed various topics, including the experiences of international students. Although I may not have covered everything, I truly hope that what I've shared is helpful to you on your journey.

My Journey for International Students

Never Give Up on Your Dream

When I was in school, I never imagined that I would one day be using a computer to create projects and write essays. At first, I didn't even know how to use a computer. However, with dedication and support from my incredible Canadian teachers, I have learned to develop interesting projects and write thoughtful paragraphs.

Joining the Immigrants Project was a turning point for me. It taught me the skills I needed to make amazing projects, and I worked hard to improve myself. Today, I can proudly say that I am one of the top students in my class.

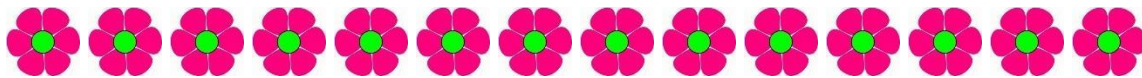

To all international students, remember: you have the potential to achieve your dreams. Don't be discouraged by challenges. With hard work and perseverance, you can succeed!

Addressing Challenges Newcomers Face

Introduction

As someone from Afghanistan, I understand the challenges of starting a new life in Canada. In my school, I have the privilege of being friends with Sofia, Sinit, Sarah, Kayla, and Zahra, who have all come to Canada from different countries. Each of them has a unique story, and together we navigate the journey of adjusting to life here. Although I couldn't record their stories because I did not have their permission, I took the time to write down their journeys on paper to include in my project. Having them in my class has not only deepened my appreciation for our diverse backgrounds but has also highlighted the challenges we all face as newcomers. From language barriers to adapting to new cultural norms, their resilience and determination continue to inspire me.

1. @Zahra says, "Moving to this new country has been really challenging for me. I'm a 13 years old girl and I am from Afghanistan, in Canada everything feels so different. The language barrier makes it hard for me to talk to people, which sometimes makes me feel lonely, even though my family is here with me. Adjusting to the culture is another big challenge. I'm trying to understand all the new customs and what's considered normal here, but it can be confusing. School is tough, too. The education system is different from what I'm used to, and I'm struggling to keep up with new subjects and how the teachers do things. I also miss my home in Afghanistan a lot. I think about my old friends and how everything felt familiar there. It's hard not to feel homesick sometimes. Making new friends here is really tough for me, as I'm quite shy. Sometimes I wish I could just find someone who understands me. But despite all these challenges, I'm determined to find my place here. I want to be happy and make a good life for myself and my family in this new environment."

2.@Sinit says, “Moving to Canada has been really tough for me. I’m 14, and I feel lost because I can’t speak English very well. It’s frustrating when people talk to me, and I just don’t understand. At school, it’s overwhelming with all the new subjects and different ways of learning. I miss Eritrea a lot. Everything feels different here, from the food to the way people act. Sometimes I just want to go back home. Being the oldest sibling also adds pressure. I need to help my younger brothers and sisters adjust, but I’m still trying to find my place too. Making friends is hard because I’m shy. I want to connect with others, but it feels scary. I really want to learn and fit in, though. I know I need to be strong for my family, and I’m determined to make this work for all of us. I want to create a happy life here in Canada.”

3.@Sofia says, “Hi, I’m Sofia, a 15-year-old girl from Afghanistan. I’m excited to share my journey with you. Just a few months ago, my family and I arrived in Canada as newcomers. While it’s been a challenge to adapt to this new culture, I hold onto the vibrant memories of my homeland. I’m learning to navigate a new language and make friends, and sometimes it feels overwhelming. But there’s a spark of joy within me that I want to express! At this community event, I found an opportunity to share my story through art. My biggest challenge now is overcoming my fears of being vulnerable and showing the world my truth. I hope to inspire others with my story and strength. Will you help me find the courage to paint my journey? Thank you?”

4. @Sarah says, “Hello, I am Sarah, and I am from Ethiopia. I’m a 14-year-old girl who came to Canada with my family two years ago. Adjusting to a new culture has been a journey, and I often find myself missing my home. One of the challenges we faced was getting food from the store since we didn’t have a car. We had to rely on the city bus, which took us about 30 minutes each way. That made grocery shopping quite challenging for us, especially with the cold weather in winter. Despite these difficulties, I’m grateful for the experiences I’ve had here. I’ve been working hard to learn English and make new friends, and every little step feels like progress. Community events have helped me connect with others and share my story. My biggest challenge has been overcoming my shyness and expressing my feelings. I hope that by sharing my journey, I can inspire others to embrace their own stories. Thank you Marwa.”

My journey,

- Since all of my dear friends share their journey, I also want to share my journey. Hello dear friends, I am Marwa, a 15-year-old girl. I arrived in Canada almost two years ago with my family. For my family and me, the toughest challenge was transportation. We needed to rely on buses to bring food or manage other household tasks, which was quite challenging for us. Although I had a school bus, it was 24 minutes away from our house. Just like Kayla, I had to run to catch my school bus. My siblings faced the same problem. My mom and dad had to walk my younger sibling to school, which made things even tougher for our family. Those days were really hard for all of us, but now I can happily say that I am having a great life with my family here in Canada. Thank you for listening to my journey!

5.@Kayla says, “Hi my dear Marwa! How are you? Since you’re working on your project, I want to share my journey as well.

Hello, I’m Kayla, a 16-year-old girl from Italy. I’ve been living in Canada for a couple of years now, but I still want to share my journey because it hasn’t always been easy. When I first started attending school here, I didn’t have a school bus for two whole months. Instead, I had to run for 15 minutes every morning just to catch the city bus. That was quite a challenge, especially with the freezing cold weather in Canada! I remember those early mornings, bundled up in my thick winter coat and racing against the clock. It was tough, but it taught me a lot about perseverance and not giving up, even when things are hard. I think it really helped me settle into my new life. Now, I’m more accustomed to the routine and feel more at home here, even if sometimes I still miss Italy. I’ve made some great friends, and sharing this experience has made me appreciate the support of my community and the strength I’ve built along the way. It’s all part of my journey, and I hope others can find inspiration in it, too!”

Canadian Culture

It is important for newcomers to understand and adapt to Canadian culture to feel more at home. Here are some key aspects to keep in mind when understanding and adapting to Canadian culture:

1. Culture and Kindness:

- ★ In all of your interactions, it's important to show respect and consideration. Canadians are known for their kindness. They frequently use "please," "thank you," and "sorry."

2. Comprehensive and Respectful:

- ★ Participate in community events and enjoy Canada's multicultural heritage by learning about different cultures, attending cultural festivals, and participating in cultural festivals.

3. Understanding Canadian Customs:

- ★ Unlike what you're used to, some customs may differ. For instance, it's common for people to maintain personal space in conversations, and direct eye contact is often seen as an expression of confidence.

4. Celebrating Holidays:

- ★ Familiarize yourself with Canadian holidays such as Canada Day (July 1) and Thanksgiving (second Monday in October). Understanding these holidays will provide insight into Canadian traditions and values.

5. Outdoor Activities:

- ★ Embracing the outdoors can be a great way to connect with the community, from hiking and camping in the summer to skiing and snowboarding in the winter.

6. Respect for Nature:

- ★ You can connect with your community and the land by engaging in eco-friendly practices and volunteering for local conservation projects.

7. Language and Insight:

- ★ The official languages of Canada are English and French. Depending on where you settle, you will likely encounter cultural nuances associated with each language. Quebec or bilingual regions will benefit particularly from learning basic French phrases.

8. Sports and Enjoyment:

- ★ Attending a local game can be a fun way to interact with neighbors and experience the culture of Canada. Ice hockey is a beloved sport in Canada, and many Canadians are passionate about various sports.
